Master of Arts

The Master's in Korean Studies at Leiden University offers specialised, in-depth study of the cultural and societal issues of pre-modern and modern Korea. Study South Korea from diverse disciplinary perspectives – at times using original source materials – from its religion and popular culture to its modern and contemporary history, with a central focus on mastering the Korean language.

Why study Korean Studies at Leiden University?

- Expertise on Asia at Leiden University is internationally renowned. Learn from some of Europe's best scholars in the field, many of whom are at the leading edge of Asia-related research.
- Tailor your qualification to reflect your interests or career ambitions. You can choose from a broad range of electives and select a subject for your MA thesis. Choose to focus on a single country, or on a specific discipline and region.
- Acquire an excellent command of the Korean language.
- All Asian Studies programmes make the most of Leiden University's world-class resources, including its famous and unique collections of Asian artifacts.
- Leiden University opened the first centre dedicated to Korean studies in Western Europe in 1947. This centre has since gone from strength-to-strength, with academics participating in high-profile research projects around the world.

Study in South Korea

Two semesters of your degree will be spent studying at one of our partner universities in South Korea, such as the Seoul National University, Sungkyunkwan University, or Yonsei University. Here you will be able to follow either Korean language courses, or content courses conducted in the Korean language. This is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to immerse yourself in South Korean culture, language, and society, while developing a host of new skills that will prepare you for real-world success after your master’s degree.

An academic career

If you have ambitions to pursue a PhD position or career as a researcher outside of academia you can apply for the two-year research master’s in Asian Studies on completion of the programme.

Career prospects

Graduates of the MA in Korean Studies can offer expertise that is highly relevant to many organisations today.

Some of the occupations of our graduates include:

- Secretary at an Embassy

A word from our Staff Members

“Korea is not only an object of study, but also a site of critical knowledge production. We do not only ask what we can know, but how we can know.”

Koen De Ceuster, Researcher and University Lecturer

What our alumni say

“Last year, immediately after graduating the 120EC Korean Studies master, I started a dual degree PhD in Korean Studies and History of Medicine/ Drugs.”

“Although there is a research master that prepares you for a PhD track, I decided to enroll for the Korean Studies track instead. Mainly because I wanted to improve my Korean language skills and take courses at a Korean university. The master gave me a solid base for PhD research. It taught me to critically engage with primary and secondary sources (in both Korean and English) within and outside my field of interest, and it introduced me to core works in the field of Asian Studies.”

Maaïke de Vries, graduated in Korean Studies
