Lecture:

Title: The Future of Economic Policy in Europe and Around the Globe

Lecturer: Dr. Jeffrey Fynn-Paul is a university lecturer at the Institute for History.

Abstract:
In this lecture, you will be introduced to some of the burning issues linking economic policy, poverty, equality, migration, and geopolitics. We will explore questions as:

- How can we summarize global economic policy since the year 2000?
- Has it worked?
- Who are the winners and losers?
- What policy options do the left, centre, and right have on offer?

Tutorial:

During the tutorial, the homework will be discussed.

Homework:

Read the following articles:
1. Nancy H. Chau (Cornell), and Ravi Kanbur (Cornell), ‘The Past, Present, and Future of Economic Development’
2. Dave Graeber (London School of Economics), ‘On the Phenomenon of Bullshit Jobs’

Answer the following questions:

1. What, according to the article by Chau and Kanbur, are the main economic causes of political unrest (‘toxification’) in the developed world today? Name two or three.
2. Does Dave Graeber have a point about the future of work? Does he suggest a realistic solution to the economic problems of the developed world?
