LUCDH Lunchtime Speaker Series

Studying the History of Technocratic Reasoning in Digitized Parliamentary Debates

with

Ruben Ros (LUCDH & Inst. of History)

Wednesday, 5 October 12:00 - 13:00

Location: Digital Lab, P.J. Veth 1.07 and Online via Kaltura

Contact: r.s.ros@hum.leidenuniv.nl

LUCDH Lunchtime Speaker Series is an opportunity for researchers to share their recent research in digital humanities. If you would like to be one of our speakers contact: lucdh@hum.leidenuniv.nl

'Technocratic institutions are often considered a threat to democracy. Outsourcing political decision-making to unelected experts is, according to many, one of the main causes for recent populist discontent. My dissertation project studies the rise of technocracy as a mode of thinking and reasoning. By studying parliamentary argumentation, I aim to shed light on the evolving role of expertise in democratic debate in twentieth-century Dutch politics. In this talk I will outline my approach to this question, and discuss the role of computational methods in my historical research.'

Email: digital-lab@hum.leidenuniv.nl.

Looking for a Recording Studio for your next Podcast?

Thurs. 6 Oct 15:00-15:30 in P.J.Veth 1.06

If you haven't used our Studio before, join Angus Mol for one of the monthly mini-tours of the Studio (P.J. Veth 1.06), and a briefing on the recording equipment.

Where can I find the Digital Lab & Studio?

The P.J. Veth building is located in the garden area opposite the Hortus Botanicus. Walk almost the length of the P.J. Veth building and enter via the main entrance staircase. Once through the wooden and glass doors, turn immediately right, and through the Student Study Lounge. Exit the lounge and take the stairs up to the first floor. You'll have found the Digital Lab in P.J. Veth 1.07! The Podcast Recording Studio is next door in 1.06. Please contact us if you need assistance with access. (There are washrooms opposite the lab; and a small kitchen area with drink water one floor up.)

The gear is very user friendly so we hope to see all you new or experienced podcasters soon!

When you're ready to record your podcast, time slot(s) can be reserved via digital-lab@hum.leidenuniv.nl

E-mail: a.a.a.mol@hum.leidenuniv.nl to confirm your place in Oct.
