Content of the Programme

In the multidisciplinary War and Peace Studies track, you will immerse yourself into core academic debates and crucial practical and policy-oriented issues surrounding war and peace. Unique about the programme is that it integrates insights from both war studies and peace studies, fields which rarely talk to each other. In this track, you will learn that you cannot understand war without understanding peace, and that you must understand war in order to know how to preserve and advance peace.

Apart from obtaining knowledge about why war breaks out, how it is conducted, how societies move from war to peace, and how peace is sustained, you will acquire key transferable skills with regard to critical analysis and data collection.

This specialisation is for you if you want to obtain insight into how societies conduct war and how they maintain peace, and what the role of the international community is in promoting peace and security.

It is also for you if you are interested in how theories translate to practice, and want to interact with practitioners to learn about the complexities of warfare and peacemaking.
