(Advanced)

FACULTY

Faculty of Governance and Global Affairs

INSTITUTE

Institute of Security and Global Affairs,
The Institute of Political Science and the Netherlands Institute of International Relations Clingendael

Content of the Programme

The Advanced Master's programme in International Relations and Diplomacy offers a unique combination of academic excellence in international relations and practical training in negotiation and diplomacy. Taught jointly by Leiden University's Institute of Security and Global Affairs, the Institute of Political Science, and the Netherlands Institute of International Relations Clingendael, this highly selective programme prepares students for the complexities of today's interconnected world.

Students benefit from experiential learning, including on-site lectures and excursions to international courts and organisations in The Hague, EU institutions in Brussels, and UN offices in Geneva. The first year includes a compulsory internship, providing hands-on professional experience, while the programme concludes with a research thesis that allows students to specialise in their chosen field.

Graduates are equipped for careers in diplomatic missions, international organisations, government and non-governmental institutions, think tanks, research centres, and international business.

This highly selective programme attracts talented students worldwide who demonstrate academic excellence, professional experience, and a commitment to study in a challenging international environment.
