

RESEARCH CLINIC

General information

Supervisor:	Dr. Min Cho Dr. Annie Trevenen-Jones
Title of clinic:	# Change # the Future #Challenge: Creative, Innovative, and Co-operative Engagement.
Number of students:	20 - 25
Major (if applicable and approved by the Major Convener):	Not Applicable
(Pre)requisites (if applicable):	Should have an interest in sustainability and global public health, applied creative critical thinking and able to work in groups under pressure.

Research context

Imagine what our world will look like in the future. What will this world need? We don't have an exact answer, but we can be part of disrupting the present and designing a sustainable, smart future. We know that our future will be determined by the complex social and ecological challenges that we currently face. Creativity, innovation and co-operation between various parties and disciplines, will be essential skills in the design and the living of this future.

This research clinic will require students to immerse themselves in an entrepreneurial and innovative universe; to think creatively and critically as well as apply ideas differently; to look beyond the boundaries of their knowledge frames of the world and of their studies; and to work together. The scope is limitless, spanning and integrating: Society (how we live, where we live, mobility, recreation, education, art, sports, 'One Health' and more), Economies, State and Citizen relations, and the Environment.

Supported by the Pressure Cooker technique, students will be encouraged to break through barriers, spark and nurture ideas, and to connect and co-operate.

Be the change, Be the future. Accept the Challenge.

Students' tasks and activities.../p2

Students' tasks and activities

1. Knowledge (theory and practice) immersion lectures.
2. Participate in pressure cooker activities (workshop sessions).
3. Apply creative and critical thinking through collaborative innovation challenge projects and field-based activities.
4. Effective content presentation in various formats and media (paper, blog, vlog, social media among others).