Fourth annual LEAC Conference 2018

27th November 2018, Nairobi, Kenya

The fourth Annual LEAC Conference

'Teaching EAC Law'

How to contribute to regional integration through academic and professional education?

Education plays a crucial role in regional integration. Integration only works when all relevant actors, including judges, civil servants, legal practitioners and businesspeople understand how regional integration works and what opportunities it offers. Considering the importance of education for regional integration, this fourth annual LEAC conference brings together professionals engaged in teaching EAC law, either at the university or at post-graduate level, including professional development courses for lawyers, civil servants and judges.

The conference will be hosted by Strathmore University Law School in close collaboration with the University of Nairobi Law School and the IRID and is open to professionals engaged in the teaching of EAC law or regional integration more generally.

The LEAC is an integral part of the Europa Institute of Leiden University. Its mission is to use its expertise in the area of EU law to support the process of regional integration, inter alia in Africa and to deepen academic understanding through comparative research. To achieve its mission, the LEAC organizes conferences, contributes to the teaching of regional integration law, brings students to Leiden to study EU law, and sends staff of the Europa Institute abroad to lecture and study the local context. It further contributes to regional integration via its publications, including its completely open access textbook on comparative EAC and EU law.
