

LACDR Research School

About the Research Schools The Leiden research programmes are concentrated in university research institutes. These institutes are often part of cross-boundary research schools.

Research schools are centres of high quality research where researchers from different universities and non-academic institutes collaborate, and where special attention is paid to the training of researchers to PhD level. In the LACDR we provide this training for PhD-researchers in our PhD programme

Leiden University participates in about 40 research schools, the majority of which are recognised by the Royal Netherlands Academy of Arts and Sciences (KNAW).

Read more about the Research Schools in which Leiden University participates>>