Professional and academic development

My 2012 PhD dissertation on the remaking of everyday life after 2004 Indian Ocean Tsunami in Aceh was awarded the prestigious J.C. Ruigrok award for the best Dutch anthropology/sociology dissertation of the last four years. My postdoctoral research at the University of Amsterdam on AIDS, human rights and morality in Indonesia (2012-2016) has initiated a new line of ethnographic research on the ‘narrative navigation’ of death-related crises (straddling post-disaster and chronic illness). This theoretical framework is further developed in my monograph with University of Hawai’i press After the Tsunami: Disaster Narratives and the Remaking of Everyday Life in Aceh (2019) as well as recent peer-reviewed articles in History and Anthropology, American Anthropologist, the Journal of the Royal Anthropological Institute, Ethos, and Culture, Medicine and Psychiatry.

At Harvard University, I consolidated my work with a Marie Skłodowska-Curie Global Fellowship on silences in AIDS care (2016-2018), during which I created an extensive research network in medical anthropology, congealing in a scholarly network on the anthropology of silence. A central question emerging from my research on AIDS care concerns the socio-cultural diversity of end-of-life care practices and possibilities, in light of the growing medicalization of death and the actual availability of palliative care. As an Associate Professor of Cultural Anthropology at Leiden University, I am studying the pressing issue of globalization and cultural diversity of end-of-life care, as a PI of the ERC Starting Grant project on Globalizing Palliative Care (2020-2025) and through interdisciplinary projects. I have recently been awarded two grants to expand this research to conduct ethnographic research on end-of-life medical treatment decisions in the Netherlands (NWO VIDI 2020-2025) and to interdisciplinary study and develop a training for medical professionals on how to deal with patients’ non-disclosure preferences (KWF Kankerbestrijding 2025-2029) I have been member, vice-chair and chair of the Young Academy Leiden (2019-2024). I am currently Director of Research in our Institute’s Board, and an editorial committee member of the Annual Review of Anthropology.
