

PROFILE

BSc Cultural Anthropology and Development Sociology

Cultural Anthropology is the social science that studies culture and society, including social behaviour, economic structures and religion. This bachelor is a unique mix of social and cultural theory and hands on research that will open many doors in life and career.

CONTENT

Politics, economy, the environment, digital media. These are topics that will be addressed. Both far away and close to home. You will specialise in the second year by choosing between two tracks: Sustainable Societies (SuSo) or Digital and Audiovisual Ethnography (DAE). All courses in the bachelor revolve around the three key themes of our programme:

Diversity

Including equality, culture, gender, religion, ethnicity and migration.

Sustainability

Including environment, economy and climate change.

Digitalisation

Including the role of social media in society and artificial intelligence.

WHAT WILL YOU LEARN

Academic Skills

To use different research methods

To recognise and analyse different arguments

Research ethics, including respecting privacy

Solid foundation in analytical writing

Anthropological Skills

Holistic approach: to take into account all different perspectives in every situation

To be observant and perceptive: understanding cultural and social differences

Study groups of people in daily life

To look critically at the way people behave and why

FUTURE JOB POSSIBILITIES

Filmmaking

Education

Research

Policy & Management

Development
work

Communication
& Media