

Short bio Michel Naslavsky

Michel Naslavsky is a biologist, PhD in genetics (University of São Paulo - USP) and assistant professor at the Genetics and Evolutionary Biology Department of the Biosciences Institute at USP. Researcher at the Human Genome and Stem Cell Research Center and visiting researcher of the Research Institute at Albert Einstein Hospital. Interested in research projects involving population medical genomics, aging, bioinformatics and bioethics. Research line in effects of admixture in interpretation of variant pathogenicity and its impacts on individual and collective health.